The Bagel Bird, by all accounts, is said to lunch on large amounts of sticks and twigs and sand and stones and plastic parts from broken phones.
He'll nibble bits of copper wires
and rubber from discarded tires.
He'll chomp on tops of cuckoo clocks and swallow shorts and stinky socks.

He'll chew your shoes and eat your hat.
He'll bite your books and baseball bat.
He'll stuff his lips with poker chips and snack on sails from sailing ships and gobble poles and bowling balls and pick at bricks from fallen walls and graze on grass and feed on weeds and dine on twine and strings of beads.

But bagels... whether white or wheat,
or salted, savory, or sweet,
or topped with lox or luncheon meat,
are something he will never eat.
At least that's what I've always heard about the crazy Bagel Bird.
But I don't mind because, you see,
that leaves more bagels just for me.

For all of their roaring, growling, and ferociousness, lions are family animals and truly social in their own communities. They usually live in groups of 15 or more animals called prides. Prides can be as small as 3 or as big as 40 animals. In a pride, lions hunt prey, raise cubs, and defend their territory together. In prides, the females do most of the hunting and cub rearing. Usually all the lionesses in the pride are related—mothers, daughters, grandmothers, and sisters. Many of the females in the pride give birth at about the same time. A cub may nurse from other females as well as its mother. Each pride generally will have no more than two adult males.

While the females usually live with the pride for life, the males often stay for only two to four years. After that they go off on their own or are evicted by other males who take over the pride. When a new male becomes part of the pride it is not unusual for him to kill all the cubs, ensuring that all future cubs will have his genes. The main job of males in the pride is defending the pride's territory. A male's loud roar, usually heard after sunset, can carry for as far as five miles (eight kilometers). The roar warns off intruders and helps round up stray members of the pride.

Hunting generally is done in the dark by the lionesses. They often hunt in groups of two or three, using teamwork to stalk, surround, and kill their prey. Lionesses aren't the most successful of hunters, because they usually score only one kill out of several tries. After the kill the males usually eat first, lionesses next—and the cubs get what's left. Males and females fiercely defend against any outside lions that attempt to join their pride.

Because of their size, strength, and predatory skills, lions are considered one of the "big cats." Tigers, cheetahs, leopards, jaguars, and cougars are also part of this grouping.
