Dorothy lived in the midst of the great Kansas prairies, with Uncle Henry, who was a farmer, and Aunt Em, who was the farmer's wife. Their house was small, for the lumber to build it had to be carried by wagon many miles. There were four walls, a floor and a roof, which made one room; and this room contained a rusty looking cooking stove, a cupboard for the dishes, a table, three or four chairs, and the beds. Uncle Henry and Aunt Em had a big bed in one corner, and Dorothy a little bed in another corner. There was no garret at all, and no cellar-except a small hole, dug in the ground, called a cyclone cellar, where the family could go in case one of those great whirlwinds arose, mighty enough to crush any building in its path. Read the given information and answer questions 38 to 45.

A garret is a special type of room that is usually located at the top of a house, often just under the roof. These rooms are often small and can sometimes be a bit uncomfortable. Garrets have a long history and are often associated with artists, writers, and students who need a quiet place to work or create. Traditionally, garrets were simple spaces where people could live or work without distractions. They might not have had much furniture or decoration, but they provided a private area for creativity and inspiration. Many famous writers and artists have worked in garrets, finding solitude and peace in these small spaces. For example, the famous author Vincent van Gogh lived in a garret while he painted many of his masterpieces.

Today, the idea of a garret has evolved. While traditional garrets are still found in older homes, many people create their own "garret" spaces in different places. For instance, someone might turn a corner of their bedroom into a cozy writing nook or use a quiet spot in a library as their creative space.

42. Based on the passage, how might a modern "garret" differ from a traditional garret?

- a. Modern garrets are always larger.
- b. Modern garrets have more furniture than traditional ones.

Climbing Song

Away, away, — to the mountains away,
Where the pine trees murmur and sway,
And the foamy waterfalls sing and spring
